(M) Lucy and Tom were two little children who were not yet old enough to go to school. When it was fine they played in the garden. They liked to look over the gate and see what was happening in the street. Often Lucy would get out her dolls and pretended to be at school. Lucy was the teacher and if Tom was in a good mood he would be a student of the class. But sometimes, especially when it rained, Lucy was bored. She was tired of playing with Tom. She was tired of her toys. Her mother said that as she was almost five she would soon be going to a real school. Lucy had her school things ready. She had a new grey skirt, a pair of brown shoes, a pencil case and a bag. Lucy and Tom knew where the school was. They saw the boys and girls going in, and heard them shouting at playtime.

第5部

次に流れる会話はシャーロック・ホームズと依頼人のソエムズさんが会話をしている場面である。二人の会話を聞いて、後の問に答えなさい。

(F) Ms. Soames: Can you give me an hour or two of your time, Mr. Holmes? Something happened this afternoon.

(M) Sherlock: I'm very busy. Maybe the police can help you. Why don't you ask them?

(F) Ms. Soames: No, no, not the police. We don't want strangers to know about this problem. You're the right person, Mr. Holmes. Only you can help.

(M) Sherlock: All right. Tell me. What happened?

(F) Ms. Soames: Tomorrow is the first day of some important tests. The test papers are, of course, secret. Every student would like to see them before the test, so we are very careful with them. I teach Greek, and at three o'clock today the Greek test papers arrived in my office. I had to read them carefully for the last time, because there can be no mistakes. But at four-thirty I went out to a friend's house for tea. I left the test paper — three pages — on my desk, but I locked my door.

(M) Sherlock: How long were you out?

(F) Ms. Soames: For about an hour. When I came back, there was a key in my door! It wasn't my key. I had my key in my coat.

(M) Sherlock: Does your secretary have a key?

(F) Ms. Soames: Yes. Bannister is a good man, Mr. Holmes, but it was his key. He visited my room five or ten minutes after I left it.

(M) Sherlock: Why?

(F) Ms. Soames: He brings me tea every afternoon. Today he forgot that I was going to visit my friend.

(M) Sherlock: And he left his key in your door when he went out.

(F) Ms. Soames: Yes. He's usually careful, but —

(M) Sherlock: But not today.

(F) Ms. Soames: No, not today.

(M) Sherlock: So you went into your room —

(F) Ms. Soames: Yes, and the test papers were there, but only one page was on the desk.

(M) Sherlock: Where was the other two pages?

(F) Ms. Soames: One was on the table near the window. The other page was on the floor.

(M) Sherlock: The first page was on the floor. The second page was on your desk. Am I right?

(F) Ms. Soames: Yes, that's right!
